Hala Halasah
Bishop Gate Resident

Hala lives alone in a studio flat. As a masters student, she enjoys the luxury of having her own kitchen and bathroom.

But what she really likes about Bishop Gate is the common space where she feels part of a community.

What's it like to live here in Bishop Gate?

Actually, it feels like home. The people here are really helpful and kind. I love everyone like family. In the morning everyone says 'Good morning. How are you?'.

How did you meet your friends?

I have my own kitchen and I have my own bathroom. So, because I don't share those facilities with other people, the chance to meet friends in that way is low. But by using the study room, the laundry and the common areas, I've met lots of people and good friends. I made most of my friends playing table tennis or billiards. The common facilities are great and really encourage communication between everyone here. There are many fun things that we can share together, for instance we have TV, so we all sit together to watch football games.

What do you think of your room here?
Does it meet your needs?

Whenever my classmates come here, they all say I have a really big room. You feel comfort. I think it's such a good room but, to be honest, the unpainted wall was something new and weird for me.

How would you sum up your experience here?

Just that I have had such a fantastic time here. I've made many friends from overseas: India, China, Indonesia, Malaysia and from the UK. I'm really happy here and my accommodation has been critical for that because I feel safe and people take care of you. I think everyone should come here and experience it!

“The staff recognise everyone and always chat to you. Security, especially, will talk your ear off! You say hello and then you’re stuck with them for five minutes. It’s nice!

“ Lots of people play table tennis in reception or use the private dining room. It's like living in a little city because there are always lots of different activities happening.
